Sri MGPL Narayana giving a talk at Gallery

“Leadership Skills for Surviving and Thriving” conducted by IEEE Student Chapter

Mr. MGPL Narayana, Vice-President, TCS, visited AITS Rajampet on 30th November 2012 as a resource person to give a talk on “Leadership Skills for Surviving and Thriving in Modern Times”. The talk was organized by IEEE Student Chapter of AITS Rajampet.

Experience gained studying, interacting chapters, networking with people, will help excel in academic careers. But life out of the colleges is different. Just being good may not be good enough to be a leader.

Leadership qualities are extracted from the lives of Great Personalities. The world is getting complex. Change is the order of the world. In this turmoil, certain qualities are required. By way of innovation, technologists also cause a change. New problems occur over a period of time, parallel to the development.

A good leader must have the ability to survive during the downturn (present survival) which will pave the way to thrive during the upturn. He must be both systematic and systemic. The former focuses on ‘how’ while the latter shifts the focus to ‘what’. By being Systematic, a leader can improve the efficiency of a process; being systemic, one can create chances of improving the effectiveness of process.

Ambiguity is the nature of problems. Behind every successful chapter, program, conference, or endeavor there is a leader. A leader is the person who brings together people and resources for a favorable result. Leadership amounts to knowing what to do and getting things done.

Gandhi is a good leader and Hitler is a great leader. A great leader is for himself and a good leader is for others. Leadership is Harmony in Thought, Word and Deed. (You do what you say, you say what you think)

Communication, Compassion, Competence, Courage, Decision-Making, Humility, Integrity, Man-Management, Purpose, Stamina, Teamwork, Training, and Vision are essential leadership qualities.

Mr. MGPL was duly felicitated by Dr. G Prabhakara Rao, Director, AITS and Dr. R. Ramakoteswara Rao, Principal, AITS.
